
Acknowledgments

As all authors note, this book could not have been written without the assistance and support of many people. Similar to the team assisting the individual to achieve his or her goals in the person-centered approach, we have also had a team accompanying us on our first book-writing journey. Sincere thanks to our editor, Nikki Levy, who warned us, “writing a book will be the hardest thing you ever do,” and she was right!

Many thanks to our colleagues who were willing to read, offer comments and support, and even edit portions of the book as it evolved: Ed Diksa, Wilma Townsend, Nirbay Singh, John Morris, Lesa Yawn, Nikki Migas, Wendy Graddison, Yana Jacobs, Penny Knapp, Sherry Kimbrough, and James W. Baxter.

Thanks are also due to the many individuals receiving services we have met in our professional careers, who have been a source of inspiration to us. They have taught us how to listen, to have hope, and to believe in them.

Most importantly, thanks to our respective families, who joined us on this road trip—sometimes willingly, sometimes not—and were the fountains of support, encouragement, understanding, and forgiveness that made writing this book possible. To our spouses, Lucy and Marion, and to our children, Alyssa, Caleb, Parris, and Zachary, we will be forever grateful.
